

Wellness Screenings

Every year, billions of dollars are spent on health care due to employee illness. Yet, approximately 70% of all illnesses are preventable.

Employers can take important steps toward preventing unnecessary sickness and injury. Preventive screening is a cost-effective way to intervene. As more and more employers choose to shoulder the burden of at least a percentage of health insurance for their employees, such preventive screening can lead to noticeable cost containment. Additionally, healthier employees remain more productive and experience less absenteeism.

WorkPoint Wellness offers several wellness screenings to detect health problems in their early stages or before they manifest.
